

THE WAGGLER

THE WAGENER-SALLEY HIGH SCHOOL NEWSPAPER

IT'S OFFICIAL! YOUR LADY WAR EAGLES ARE FIVE, and yes I said 5, TIME DEFENDING REGION CHAMPIONS! The Lady War Eagles went 14-0 in region for the 2nd year in a row. However, this year was a little bit more special. The team did not lose one set in region play, sweeping every region team. This team is truly special! Congratulations Ladies and Coach Hutto!!

Congratulations Senior Lady War Eagles!

Wagener-Salley High- The Movie

Paige Strang

If school was a movie, Wagener Salley High would be "The Perks of Being a Wallflower". This movie is about a socially awkward teen who had just started high school. Two of the upperclassmen helps to mentor him during his freshman year. This reminds me of Wagener because we all know what it is like to start at a higher level of schooling, therefore we help one another out. That is one thing about Wagener that I love, everyone is there for each other.

WAGENER-SALLEY 52, WILLISTON-ELKO 28

Wagener-Salley bounced back with a big win over Williston-Elko to keep the War Eagles perfect in Region 3-A play. Cameron Davis, Jawaine Gleaton, Ian Stroman, and Jamari Stroman received game balls from the Aiken Standard for their performances against Williston. Wagener-Salley (3-2, 2-0) headed to Denmark-Olar on Friday, but came up short 50-42 Denmark.

Green Bean Spaghetti Carbonara

Rachael Ray

Servings: 4

Ingredients:

1 pound spaghetti

¾ pound green beans, cut into bite-size pieces

½ pound bacon, chopped

1 medium onion, finely chopped

2 eggs

1 cup grated parmesan cheese

Salt and pepper

Directions:

Step 1

Cook pasta according to package directions, adding beans halfway through cooking time; drain, reserving 1/4 cup cooking water. Brown bacon in large skillet over medium heat; add onion and soften; deglaze with reserved cooking water. Whisk eggs with cheese. Off heat, add pasta, beans, eggs and cheese to skillet and toss; season with salt and pepper.

The Importance of Being on Time!!

Being Late Weakens Your Position: When you're late, you're starting off on the wrong foot. Nobody wants to start an important business meeting or class with an apology. You may also be stressed and scattered, which may make the other person question their choice to work with you or the seriousness of you taking the class. If you can't even be trusted to be on time, why would a customer or employer trust you with their money?

How to flip it: When you know the importance of punctuality, it puts you in the driver's seat. Being on time helps you be cool, calm, and collected, and you make a great impression by showing the other person you respect their valuable time. By arriving early, you allow yourself a few extra minutes to think through your argument, and you appear more confident, poised, and in control.

When You're Not on Time, You're Stealing: If time is money, then by arriving five minutes late you've just stolen something of value from the other person, which is NOT a great way to start any important business negotiation or student/teacher relationship. The other person feels like they've already given you something, so they're not going to be as likely to give you more.

How to flip it: Being on time instantly makes the person feel valued and appreciative, which could make them more open to you.

Being Late Communicates a Lot...and None of it is Good: Being late tells others a lot about you, your integrity, and your respect for other people. It tells them you think your time is more important than theirs, and whatever you are doing is more important than what they could be doing. It shows disrespect and disregard, and it tells the other person you're totally unreliable, careless, and disorganized.

How to flip it: Being on time tells others that you're trustworthy, considerate, and prepared. You're showing them they are important to you and you are bringing your A-game.

There's No Good Excuse: Other than a real emergency – and no, sleeping late and traffic don't count – being on time is 100% within your control, and it's easy! Sure, staying on the schedule does take some planning and organization, but compared to almost every other challenge you could face at work or school, being on time is a cakewalk. Being late is like shooting yourself in the foot.

How to flip it: Being on time is an incredibly simple way to impress others, make people like you, and make yourself look good. Why wouldn't you do it?

Being Late Wastes Time: When you're late, you're not buying yourself a few “extra minutes” you're throwing away those minutes on things that could have been accounted for with a little planning. Being late often forces you to do extra work because you haven't organized your thoughts ahead of time. What you missed, you can't get back. It leaves a lot of guesswork.

How to flip it: Knowing the importance of punctuality, on the other hand, saves you time. Good time management makes you more efficient, which means you can have time for the important things.

Being Late Wastes Money: Ever miss an appointment or a show because you were running late? Being late can lead to some costly mistakes. People don't wait. The show must go on. Have you lost money because you couldn't get somewhere on time?

How to flip it: Always being on time can save you from a wide variety of late fees and penalties, and it can help you catch that precious first-come, first-served deals.

Being Late Makes You Scatterbrained: The stress you feel when you're constantly running late interferes with your ability to make decisions, think and speak clearly, perform with precision, and get things done with a winning attitude.

How to flip it: By being on time, you're able to start class, projects, and your work/school day clear-headed and free from the nagging emotional distractions.
